Chicago, IL—Emerging designers from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago (SAIC) will present new work at Milan’s premier independent design showroom, Spazio Rossana Orlandi, during the Salone Internazionale del Mobile (International Furniture Fair), April 12–17, 2011. Their exhibition, LOADED, is the result of an intense two-semester design studio directed by Helen Maria Nugent and Jim TerMeer, both professors in the department of Architecture, Interior Architecture, and Designed Objects (AIADO) at SAIC.

The provocative objects presented in LOADED exploit the history, physicality, and currency of two catalytic materials: iron and sugar. In addition to the exhibition’s 13 original designed objects (lighting, tableware, and jewelry), two of the projects—one in sugar, the other in iron—will be produced in multiples specifically for the show. Elements of the exhibition design also engage in this investigation, resulting in custom cast-iron display fixtures and sculptural sugar props.

High resolution press images from the project are available online at www.saic.edu/images. Project summaries, process images, and more information will soon be available at www.saic.edu/loaded.

Other presentations at Spazio Rossana Orlandi during the fair include projects by Naoto Fukasawa, Jasper Morrison, Jaime Hayon, Humberto and Fernando Campana, Muuto, Piet Hein Eek, and Raw Edges (Shay Alkalay + Yael Mer).
About the School of the Art Institute of Chicago
