

WEBSITE PLATFORMS/BUILDERS

1. <http://www.coroflot.com/>

Coroflot is home to over 2 million images with over 150,000 new projects published every month from professionals and students from all over the world. Another perk to being free is their job board. Their promise is to provide “the space and opportunity for creative professionals and hiring companies to find each other.”

2. <https://behance.net/>

Behance prides itself on creating an online platform which showcases and allows discovery for creative work. Their innovative platform distributes work to other online galleries, maximizing exposure for top talent on their site. Behance believes “Great work should spread efficiently across the globe, gaining the exposure it deserves.”

3. <http://www.cargocollective.com/>

Cargo is different than other portfolio sites because it offers their members a way to create freestanding personal websites with their own URL. However, there is a catch- you must be invited to join. Nonetheless, Cargo grants memberships to a number of people who contact them and share their work with the staff.

4. <https://dropr.com/>

DROPR is a free and easy site to set up your portfolio. It allows you to easily upload images, music, video, text and even interactive work such as Flash and HTML5 to your online portfolio. Dropr also allows you to connect with your existing networks such as LinkedIn, Flickr, MySpace, Vimeo, SoundCloud and Behance to ease the content importing process.

5. <https://carbonmade.com/>

Carbonmade is home to nearly 500,000 hosted portfolios and is a great choice for displaying your art work. It's a free and straightforward portfolio site for those of you who aren't interested in all the bells and whistles of social media plugins.
