Uptown & Ravenswood Green Map

Part of the Chicago, IL Green Map Project

This neighborhood of Chicago did not become heavily inhabited until the building of the Elevated train after 1900, which made it accessible to the downtown area. It was an area that drew in many transient dwellers coming to Chicago for temporary work including Native Americans and Appalachian whites. It has been a neighborhood of many ethnicity's including Hispanics, Cubans, Koreans, and most recently indo- Chinese refugees from Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and Thailand. This variety can be felt in the wide range of restaurants and markets in the area. The neighborhood is also well known for some of its live music venues including The Green Mill and Aragon. This is a unique area that can be appreciated for it's cultural diversity and the neighborhood that they have created.
